2.1.Learning outcomes that define the subject

Students should obtain the following results:

- Critically analyse, recognise and identify specialised and rigorous sources when performing bibliographic searches about a given theme
- Carry out processes to prepare, produce and undertake academic works with suitable content and presentation. Students should consider a specific and coherent frame and style of academic writing in relation to the body of the work
- Prepare oral presentations in time, style and content terms

2.2.Introduction

The theoretical-practical content of this subject intends to provide students with an initial approach that brings them closer to the premises and guidelines that they must consider to be able to begin with aspects related with documental research and communication, or with disseminating research results. The intention is to make students aware of the need to make critical evidence-based judgements to be able to conduct literature review tasks, write scientific/academic documents, and orally present them.
