The teaching staff of the Degree in Psychology and the Master's degree in PGS will offer, during the month of July, their research lines and the number of Master's Dissertations (TFM) that can handle.

In September, after the course enrollment, students will choose the TFM and supervisor according to their academic grades from the first year of the Master's.

61879 - Master's Dissertation

Students, independently, will have enough time to carry out all activities required for the elaboration of the TFM, using materials and resources recommended by their supervisors.

5.2.Learning tasks

The course includes the following learning tasks:

- In September, after the enrollment period, there will be an explanatory class. The Master's coordinator will present the TFM guidelines and will clarify any questions that students may have.
- TFM-related tutorials should be scheduled by students and supervisors, and can be individual, in group or virtual. In tutorials, students will solve specific questions about the activities being developed regarding the TFM, and the supervisors will review and evaluate the progress made by the students.

5.3.Syllabus

There is not specific syllabus for this course. The students enrolled in this course will have access to the TFM guide in the Master's webpage.

5.4.Course planning and calendar

The submission and defence of the TFM will be announced with in advance.

5.5.Bibliography and recommended resources

- Recommended resource: read the TFM guide on the Master's webpage.
