4.1.Methodological overview

The learning process that has been designed for this course is based on the following:

The teaching methodology aims to the student to be partner in the learning process, motivating the constancy and the conduct to be in a continuous learning process. So the methodology combines, on the one hand, the face-to-face system in the classroom (with theoretical lessons alongside practical teaching based the case model, exhibition and debate by the students) and, on the other, the system of guided and independent work by the student that takes place outside the classroom.

4.2.Learning tasks

The program offered to the student to help him achieve the expected results includes the following activities:

Expository activities and systematization of knowledge by the teacher. Methodology: theoretical class. This type of classes provide the student with a first theoretical contact with the concepts and basic knowledge of the subject that will allow him, later, to carry out a more effective personal work and, in the end, a better learning of the subject, being able to train him for a more clear identification of the problems related to the matters of family law and inheritance and to try to design the ways of legal solution to them.

Dynamic activities of teacher and students. Methodology: practical teaching based on the case model, exposure and debate of the students. In these activities the student intervention in the classroom is promoted, it is facilitated to develop the capacity to identify and analyze the legal problems, as well as its critical sense and its skill for the oral presentation making use of the technical-juridical language of the subject . These activities may also consist of the study and analysis of sentences or in seminars of diverse content.

Personal study of the student, tutorials, work and evaluation activities.
