1.General information

1.1.Aims of the course

This subject tries to achieve a basic research education on inclusion from a critical perspective.

1.2.Context and importance of this course in the degree

In the Master's Degree in Lifelong Learning in multicultural contexts inclusion is the basic field of study. Its meaning is reinforced by the needs and demands of the current social, legislative, educational and research framework that support and justify the master's degree itself. In a more concrete way, from the social point of view, the changes that have taken place in our society from the globalization and the increase of migration, among other factors, turn inclusion into a subject of necessary consideration. From a legislative point of view education emphasizes inclusion as a fundamental principle. In the research framework, systematizing knowledge about the reality of inclusive education is a necessity. The programme will therefore enrich the knowledge and analysis of inclusion policies and practices to contribute to articulate changes from a more holistic perspective. From policies that emphasize quality, attention is focused on the needs of all those involved, not just individual needs. It is also important to highlight the contradictions concerning education and inclusion.

1.3.Recommendations to take this course

2.Learning goals

E04 - Essai work	60	60
E05 - Auto-assessment	10	10

The design of an original and viable Project will be valued from the following aspects:

- a) Review of the art: Key words, Comprehensive search, Diversification of search resources: books, articles and telematic resources (for both secondary and primary references). Personal and well structured synthesized speech.
- b) Questions and purposes of research: Clear formulation. Good derivation of the knowledge review. Originality and feasibility study.
- c) Methodological design: Justified and consistent purpose, paradigm, strategies and instruments. Timing and budgets (realistic and adjusted).
- d) Bibliographic support: relevant and sufficient.
- e) Questionnaires / survey (if any): Good formulation and structuring. Correct writing. Adequacy to the objective and research model. Understandable and motivating for those who must answer it. Validated through a system of judges.
- f) Public defense

4.Methodology, learning tasks, syllabus and resources

4.1.Methodological overview

The methodology followed in this course is oriented towards achievement of the learning objectives. This course favors the acquisition of knowledge about the subject-matter, and the situation of its research and educational implications.

As teaching methodologies the course includes lectures (M01), review and/or analysis of reports (M02), and a project design (M03).

Regarding the learning tasks, they will be related to, on the one hand, information searching and documentation and, on the other hand, to the analysis of different articles. The design of an original project will be another important task. Theoretical and practical tasks should consider as starting points, real situations, inquiry, reflection, dialogue and cooperation.

4.2.Learning tasks

The course includes the following learning tasks:

- Lectures: 8 hours.
- Practice sessions: 6 hours.
- Individual and group work: 4 hours.
- Students' presentations: 6 hours.
- Discussion groups / exchange and debate: 4 hours.
- Study / Complementary readings: 20 hours.
- Discussion / Supervision of work: 25 hours.
- Assessment task: 2 hours.
